*Nothing could be finer on a beautiful afternoon, than curling up with a good book and unwinding on your bed swing, as it gently sways in the breeze.
Our bed swings, handcrafted in the Lowcountry of South Carolina, create a space where you can relax and let your cares melt away... just breathe...*

at my favorite Italian deli and DiStefano's Authentic Italian. There is just something about simple and delicious it is. It's something that I find myself craving, I can't make a trip without stopping by, at least.

I think most people who love that "authentic" Italian is with the traditions of old Italian cooking. The easiest to achieve this is by using local, seasonal products available to you. It's about the ingredients.

What I find most exciting is the resurgence of interest in these traditions. I'm personally not drinking wine, I don't know enough about it to appreciate its intricacies. It's refreshing to have the option of a refined meal when out dining that is taken as much care as home cooking as we strive to perfect our kitchen with the finest.

What I love most about the South try and Southern is the close in concept of cooking, using what you have in the finest
